London, 24th August 2015 – An adventurous tween makes the most of her middle school days in Nickelodeon's new live-action series 100 Things To Do Before High School, launching on Monday 28th September at 4:30pm with a week of brand-new episodes. The show follows CJ and her two best friends as they take on a bucket list of challenges before starting high school.

100 Things To Do Before High School introduces new Nickelodeon star Isabela Moner as CJ Martin, who always dreamed that high school would be the greatest years of her life. However, when CJ's older brother warns her that life after middle school isn't quite the teenage dream, she realises she only has a short time left to make the most of her middle-school years. Together with her two best friends Fenwick (Jaheem Toombs) and Crispo (Owen Joyner), CJ is determined to get the most out of this time using an ever-expanding list of challenges to do before high school as a guide. For this group, growing up means trying everything and taking chances while they still can.

In the first episode "Start a Garage Band Thing" CJ, Fen and Crispo start a garage band in the hope of winning the top prize at their school's music festival. However, when creative differences break up the band, CJ must find a way to reunite them for their big performance.

A sneak peek of the first episode will be available a week before the TV premiere on nick.co.uk/100things. Fans can also find quizzes, exclusive behind the scenes clips and images.

100 Things To Do Before High School is created and executive produced by Scott Fellows (Big Time Rush), following a week of premieres, new episodes will continue to air every Friday at 4:30pm.
